

Come with us tonight on a “Sentimental Journey” back to the Golden Age of Kate Smith, Frank Sinatra, Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller and the Andrews Sisters!

The 1940s was a decade in which we learned that “Freedom isn’t Free.” The United States entered WWII and by the end of the war became the most powerful nation in the world. The civil rights movement had its beginnings in the 40s and it would change the U.S. forever. The first, black professional baseball player was signed to the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947.

Big bands dominated the radio with legendary band directors like Duke Ellington, Tommy & Jimmy Dorsey and Glenn Miller. Alongside them were performers like Billy Holiday, Ella Fitzgerald, Dizzie Gillespie and Doris Day.

The 1940s was a time of growth and learning for the U.S. The 1940s saw the birth of The Atomic Bomb, The United Nations, the microwave oven and Rock ‘n Roll. It was a decade that will forever be remembered for bringing great change to our way of life. We hope you enjoy the journey...
